CONCEPT NOTE

Law is a social phenomenon. It creates meanings, and reflects the issues and concerns of society by expanding the working and understanding of political values of justice, rights and liberties. Given the complexity of the present times, it is becoming increasingly pertinent to probe deeper into the working of different legislations, their intent and implications. This is important to expand the democratic spaces of free expression and innovations. Such probings will research within academia and discussions in the larger community on a range of emergent issues, like, digital spaces, technology and environment.

The present refresher course envisages an engagement with certain areas of law, legal research and pedagogy to better contextualize and reflect on the socio-political and economic implications of legislations on issues of identity, inclusion, technology and environment. This course will provide a platform to exchange ideas and initiate discussions on various facets of law.
