CONCEPT NOTE

Pharmaceutical sciences, chemical sciences, bioinformatics, biotechnology, chemical biology, and nutraceuticals have all faced new opportunities as a result of progress in life science research and development. Exploration in the biological sciences has resulted in significant advances in our understanding of basic molecular and cellular processes and mechanisms. Research and education prepare us for a better future, but finding the best possible means to network with people from academia and industry around the world and to learn how to develop our talents and contribute to our country's productive force is just as vital. Through the Refresher Program, faculty members and research scientists from various institutes/colleges will be able to stay up to date on the most recent discoveries in the field of Life Sciences. Faculty members will also be able to improve their teaching effectiveness, update their instructional methodologies, and publish their findings in journals and publications as a result of this programme. It will also help faculty members develop their research skills by exposing them to cutting-edge research.
